NEWS + NOTES

Can you believe July is here? Our summer heat is a good reason to stay indoors and plan out the next few months. Top of the list is 999 Morrison Drive, a parcel of land just acquired by the City of Charleston that will soon become the beacon for Charleston's knowledge economy and the Charleston Digital Corridor. It would be terrific to host even more tech start-ups at various stages of development all contributing to the Charleston's economic vitality.

"Flagship 3"

The proposed new facility at 999 Morrison Drive, scheduled for a Summer 2015 delivery, is approximately 40,000 feet over 4 floors with some accessory retail uses. Send me any links to projects/ideas that you think should be incorporated into the new building and yes any naming suggestions as well.

CODEcamp

This May, CODEcamp completed its first year. With data from the 187 participants, the summer seemed the perfect time to take a break from classes and evaluate all the information to improve the program to benefit our two distinct audiences. CODEcamp 2.0 will start in September, after Labor Day. Stay tuned.

CODEshow

While on the topic of education, planning is underway for CODEshow 2014 at the Dock Street Theatre. I would like to hear from you about topics of interest for this spring conference. You can view presentations from our 2013 conference on our Talent Channel.

Charleston Free WiFi

Thanks to our friends at Google, Charleston's Waterfront Park joins Marion Square and Governor's Park with free public WiFi access. This nationally recognized park is soon to be featured on GoogleTrekker. Btw, Google is hiring for their Berkeley County Data Center.

Charleston - A Tech Hub

We have started a new series of videos to spotlight some of Charleston's knowledge economy. The first two videos feature PeopleMatter and Boomtown. More to come, enjoy!
